AMAZING HORSE COUNTRY

Welcome to Your Workshop with Scott Phillips!

We're excited that you'll be joining us for this workshop and look forward to helping you and your horse take the next step in your horsemanship journey. Here are some helpful tips for you to make your workshop experience amazing.

Start and End Times

For full 3 or 4 day workshops, the start and end times are below. For other workshops such as a 2.5 day format, we'll typically do a classroom session the first evening and then arena work the next two full days.

Start Time: 8:30AM in the classroom.
For Progressive Horsemanship, 8:30 in the arena with the first horse/person team.

End Time: Typically 4PM, and 3:30PM on the last day.
For Progressive Horsemanship the last slot will wrap up around 5PM.

Participation

All participants work in the arena together, creating an engaging learning environment where everyone benefits from observing and supporting one another's progress. The exception is the Progressive Horsemanship Workshop, which is conducted using individual time slots. Workshop participation is typically limited to eight riders, making the experience personal, manageable, and enjoyable.

Participants are expected to attend all days of the workshop. Our clinics follow a progressive format, with each day's learning building on the skills and exercises introduced previously. Missing a day can make it difficult to fully benefit from the remainder of the workshop.

Please plan to arrive with enough time to unload, settle your horse, and be ready to begin at the scheduled start time. Many participants choose to arrive the evening before the clinic begins, allowing for a relaxed, stress-free start on the first morning.

Itinerary

While each workshop follows a general structure, the exact itinerary remains flexible and is shaped by the needs of the participants and their horses. This allows us to focus on the skills, challenges, and opportunities that will create the greatest success for each horse and rider combination.

Example - Partnership Workshops follow this format:

First Morning

- Classroom session
- Groundwork session (horses work in a halter only and are not saddled)

First Afternoon

- Horses are saddled and in a halter to start. We continue to build on the groundwork concepts introduced during the morning groundwork session.
- Next, we transition those same principles into riding exercises.

From that point forward, the workshop develops according to the needs and progress of the participants and their horses, with each session building on the previous one. Liberty and Foundation Workshops follow a slightly different format.

Questions About the Workshop?

If you have questions about the clinic itself, we're happy to help. Here are some answers to common questions:

- All people and all horses are welcome in our workshops. There are no prerequisites, and every clinic is designed to meet you and your horse where you are today.

- Every horse and rider combination presents unique opportunities for learning, and our workshops are designed to help you make meaningful progress regardless of your experience level or your horse's stage of training.

- It is not even necessary to ride. For example, you may be starting a colt and wish to participate in the Partnership Workshop to develop the leadership, communication, and foundation that will support your future riding goals.

- It is also not necessary to "get your horse ready" before attending. The purpose of these workshops is to build your partnership, strengthen your leadership, and improve your horse's athleticism in a way that is tailored to you and your horse as individuals. Sometimes, attempts to prepare beforehand can lead riders to focus on things that may not need attention or may even work against the concepts and approach we will be developing together. Let's start where you are.

- When deciding which horse to bring, we typically recommend bringing the horse you feel you need to work with the most, or the horse with whom you have a particular goal, challenge, or area of focus. This allows you the greatest learning opportunity.

- If you have any questions about which horse to bring, whether a particular clinic is right for you, or anything else related to the workshop or it's format, please contact us directly.

Questions About the Facility?

Your clinic host is the best person to answer questions regarding the venue and accommodations, such as:

- Overnight stabling
- Pens or paddocks
- Camping
- RV parking and hookups
- Hotels and accommodations
- Arrival and departure times
- Facility amenities
- Directions and local information

Payment, Cancellation and Refund Policies

All workshop registrations are subject to your host's policies on reservation, cancellation, and refunds. Generally you'll find the following. If your host has different policies, those will take precedence.

- A $200 non-refundable deposit is required to secure your workshop spot.
- The remaining balance must be paid no later than 45 days before the workshop start date.
- If you cancel within 45 days of the workshop start date, the balance portion of your payment will only be refunded if your vacated spot is filled by another participant.
- If you cancel on or outside of 45 days prior to the clinic start date, your balance portion will be refunded.
- If you find someone to take your spot, please notify your host and provide the replacement participant's contact information as soon as possible.
- Workshops hosted at different locations are operated by independent hosts as part of their own businesses. As a result, registrations are specific to the workshop for which you registered and cannot be transferred to a workshop hosted elsewhere.
- If circumstances beyond the control of the host and Amazing Horse Country present themselves (weather, pandemics, etc.) the workshop will be rescheduled.
- For complete payment, cancellation, and refund details, please ask your host.

By registering for a clinic, participants acknowledge and agree to these policies.

We Look Forward to Working With You

Our goal is to help you build a deeper relationship with your horse while developing practical skills you can take home and use for years to come.

Thank you for choosing to learn with us. We can't wait to meet you and your horse.

See you at the workshop!
